SJEC PUBLIC TRAFFIC in India.

For decades, our company has been deeply involved in the Indian market, achieving remarkable results! We have broken the monopoly of multinational companies, and since then, Chinese figures and voices have appeared in Indian public transportation projects, providing high-tech, cost-effective, High quality, stable and reliable products and services to the Indian market, which has been highly welcomed by the Indian market.

Not counting commercial projects, just the public transportation projects alone, our company has supplied over 2,500 heavy duty escalators, with an amount exceeding 1.25 billion yuan. Fifteen years ago, our company won the tender for the first phase of the Chennai Metro project. In 2024, we won the extension line of this project again. This winning bid was the customer's response to our previous answers. At the same time, we also won the Chennai Metro Phase II project, Mumbai Metro 2B project, Mumbai Metro Line 9 project, totaling 411 units. All of them are FEH20 heavy-duty escalators (among which Mumbai Metro 2B line and Line 9 are two projects we won after winning the bids for Mumbai Metro Line 3 and Line 7).

AIRPORT

AIRCRAFT BOARDING

An aircraft boarding ramp is a device designed to transport passengers or cargo between different levels. It is commonly used in airports, train stations, docks, and other transit hubs to provide convenient and accessible movement for people.

The use of such elevators eliminates the need for passengers to navigate ramps or stairs, making it especially beneficial on steeper inclines where carrying luggage could be burdensome. This feature is particularly important for elderly individuals and those with mobility challenges.

The boarding ramp is simple and convenient to operate: passengers need only use the handrail or press the elevator button for effortless access.

Nicolinehus, Danmark.

Nicolinehus is a well-known building in Aarhus, Danmark, often admired for its modern architecture and historical significance. The building was originally designed as a factory in the early 20th century and later converted into residential and commercial spaces. Its design and location have made it a popular subject for photographers.

The building's modernist architecture: You might see images focusing on the clean lines, large windows, and industrial aesthetic of Nicolinehus.

The surrounding area: The building is located near the harbor and downtown Aarhus, so there are many beautiful photos that include the view of the water, nearby streets, or the city skyline.

The integration of old and new: Nicolinehus is a great example of how historical architecture can be seamlessly integrated with modern design elements. Pictures that capture this contrast are usually striking.

Night views: Since Nicolinehus is often lit up beautifully at night, there are some fantastic photos that capture the building in the golden light of the evening or reflected in the water.
